

Green Careers Program

Developing a Green Workforce

Envisioning alternatives means building a just and equitable local green economy; one where marginalized communities play a leading role in environmental education and green job experience.

Global Exchange, in partnership with City College of San Francisco South East Campus, has launched a unique program that provides environmental education, job training, mentorship, and support for City College students. Through paid summer internships, students connect with local green businesses while receiving educational support and work-related guidance in order to ensure a successful career in the green economy.

SunWater Solar is pleased to announce that they are a participating green business in the program for the summer of 2009. Ali Mohamed Soilihi is working with the SunWater Solar team to promote the benefits of solar hot water systems for businesses and homes around the Bay Area.

We hope that by bridging the gap between green job opportunities for underrepresented communities and the fast-growing green economy, we can collectively restore the environment and the future health of our communities.
